

IPEMED

IPEMED, the world Mediterranean Economic Foresight Institute, is a non-profit organisation, which strives to integrate the countries of the North and South of the Mediterranean via economic means. Since its creation in February 2006, it raises awareness of the common future and interests of the Northern and Southern countries of the Mediterranean. IPEMED adheres to the principles of political independence and North-South parity in its governance and operations. It accords priority to the economy, favours an operational approach to projects, and works to a long-term perspective.

As a Euro-Mediterranean think tank, IPEMED has three main functions:

- to produce forward-looking ideas, to develop diagnosis shared between North and South and between Southern countries;
- to break down barriers between the worlds of business, politics and experts, with a view to elaborating realistic and pragmatic projects ;
- to influence political spheres, so that they will implement public policies to encourage North-South exchanges and facilitate regional integration.

IPEMED is funded by Mediterranean companies, who share its values, and gathered together in the Euro- Mediterranean Competitiveness Confederation (EMCC) to make their voice heard and build a major integrated economic region.

Radhi Meddeb is the President of IPEMED; Jean-Louis Guigou, his founder Delegate General.
